ets Israeli Need At Two Billion ollars In Next Four Years

...el will need a minimum in-...ent of $2,000,000,000 to ab-...an expected influx of 750,000 ...igrants in the next four years, ...ert Nathan, director of the ...omic department of the Jewish ...ency, declared in New York at luncheon at the New Yorker Hotel.

Dr. Mordecai M. Kaplan, theologian, visualized "nothing more fantastic than that a substantial number of Jews migrate from here to Israel." He said this would create "a political earthquake that would make the world unsafe for Jews." The Jews here must remain an integral part of America, entering into a covenant with the Jews of Israel and elsewhere to keep alive Jewish tradition, the rabbi declared.

Dr. Horace M. Kallen, former dean of the graduate faculty of the New School for Social Research, presided.

Immigration has increased the population in Israel 30 per cent this year, Mr. Nathan told 500 American Jewish cultural delegates to the National Assembly for Labor Israel. He put the immigrant influx at 225,000.

Predicting that Israel's population would double in four or five years, Mr. Nathan said that hundreds of thousands would be coming from the Iron Curtain countries, the Middle East and the Far East.

"We want to see them absorbed and prosperous," he declared. "There must be growth agriculturally and industrially in Israel."

Mr. Nathan defined the assets of the immigrants as "manpower and creative talent." He envisaged Israel as a country where "specialized products" would be produced for ... If Israel is to ... specialized ...

in large imports and exports, he declared.

Investment will be required to provide housing, hotels, factories, public utilities and public works for the absorption of the new elements into Israel, the economist said. He advocated a mixed economy, with some funds derived from the people inside, some from Governments and some from other private investment. Citing the $100,000,000 that Israel obtained from the United States Import-Export Bank, he said about $500,000 additional must be borrowed from a similar source or the World Bank.

"As soon as Israel starts looking for Government funds," Mr. Nathan said, "there are bound to be political implications. Questions will arise as to whether the United States is trying to dictate Israel policy because Israel owes it money. In the case of a loan from an Iron Curtain country, Israel would lay itself open to criticism by the Western democracies."

Declaring that the Israel Government must be able to get large sums from sales of securities, Mr. Nathan saw no choice for Israel "but to move in the direction of getting capital wherever it can."

"If the people are to become self-supporting," he said, "large amounts of private capital are essential to Israel. The absorption of 225,000 immigrants a year is impossible unless private capital and know-how come in. Incentives must be provided to bring in private capital."

Mr. Nathan visualized the new Government of Israel as "liberal", with plans for making the most of its opportunities. He stressed a well-controlled economic program. If "austerity" is essential, it must "make sense", he said.

The speaker took issue with an assumption that Israel was based upon charity, which he termed

Warns On Army Role In Israel

The army in Israel is showing a tendency to play a greater role than it should in a democratic state, Hayim Greenberg, a member of the Jewish Agency executive, heading its department of culture and education, declared in New York at the New Yorker Hotel before 500 delegates to the first National Assembly for Labor Israel. He suggested that the labor movement prevent the Israeli army from becoming too influential.

Recently returned from Israel, he reported that the army, though smaller than a year ago, was stronger and better equipped and said that its actions indicated "a dangerous symbol with respect to civil liberties."

Mr. Greenberg called for vigilance by labor to keep the military in Israel from "exercising a role which is not within its province." He particularly referred to instances of military censorship designed to curb the freedom of the press.

"I do not object to the existence of military censorship while a country still is at war, but military censorship should deal only with those items relevant to the security of the state," he said. "Liberal circles must be altered against this danger."

He cited two examples of peacetime army censorship. One concerned a poem which in his opinion "divulged no military information, but which some found embarrassing to the Government." The Israeli Parliament overruled the military demand that the poem be withdrawn and it appeared, according to the New York Times.

The other instance centered about a play of Igal Mosinson produced by the Habimah dealing with a Negeb settlement. Entitled "In the Prairie of the Negeb," it ... refusal was later justified during military operations. The army took offense. Under military pressure the play was changed to show that the military were responsible for not having the people evacuate the settlement.

Aubrey S. Eban, Israeli representative to the United Nations analyzed the Arab refugee question. He said that "the missing link in the chain is the refusal of the Arab states so far to assume their due share of responsibility for a problem which their own action has created."

Before ending its two-day session, the Assembly issued a declaration of policy urging the United Nations and the United States "to press for the conclusion of peace in Palestine and to approve such boundaries for Israel as will give it economic and strategic security."

The assembly further proposed that "in view of the present need to resettle both Jewish immigrants and Arab refugees the United States should encourage Jewish-Arab cooperation, with United Nations support, in a regional plan of economic development covering a wide area of the Eastern Mediterranean."

Arab nations are using the misery of Arab refugees as a political pawn and are planning to renew the war against Israel "at the earliest opportunity," Arthur Lurie, Israeli consul general in New York, charged, speaking to delegates attending the First National Assembly for Labor Israel.

"Politically," Mr. Lurie said, "those of our enemies who failed last year in Paris to persuade the General Assembly of the United Nations to accept the Bernadotte Plan have not given up hope.

"The offensive on behalf of the mutilation of Israel by cutting our small territory, the Negeb, is once again under way, though presently covertly and without fanfare. In the game of power politics, the fact that the Arabs have already more deserts than they know what to do with and that the Negeb will be developed, if developed at all, only by the Jews, is irrelevant."

If Israel took back the refugees under Arab conditions it would be an "invitation to suicide," he said. Baruch Zuckerman, president of the Labor Zionist Organization, pointed to the "partnership" between Israel and the Jews of the western world, particularly in the United States, as the basis for "Jewish continuity."

He said socialism has become increasingly important in Jewish life and that where "an entire new ... which life is being built" these ideals can be successful.

Girl, Catholic "Mother" Meet In New York

Felicia Grunfeder is ten years old; she has gentle brown eyes and a crown of lush blonde hair, tumbling nearly to her waist. And she has two families — one Jewish, one Christian.

In New York, at the Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society Shelter, 425 Lafayette Street, Felicia rushed happily into the arms of her silver-haired Christian "mamusia," Mrs. Joseph Arens, who for four years had reared her as her own daughter to hide her from the Nazis.

Mrs. Arens, repeating a welcome to Felicia and the girl's real mother, Mrs. Maria Grunfeder, to America, gave Felicia a gold lavaliere, with the Ten Commandments and the Star of David. And she prayed for Felicia to be "a good American, and forget what it was in Europe."

The story was pieced together from the halting English of Mr. Arens, now a house painter, in his second-floor rear flat at 568 Third Avenue, Brooklyn; the Polish of Mrs. Grunfeder and Mrs. Arens, translated by Mrs. Helen Kaszuba, in her delicatessen at 574 Third Avenue, Brooklyn, and H. I. A. S. officials.

Felicia was born November 30, 1938, daughter of a wine merchant in Warsaw. The Nazis overran Poland, and her father, Chiel, disappeared. Mrs. Grunfeder was told he was dead. Walled up in the Warsaw ghetto, Mrs. Grunfeder bribed a way of escape for Felicia, then three and a half.

On the day when a wagon hauled away bodies of dead Jews past Nazi soldiers, Felicia was crammed into a box underneath the driver's seat. When the wagon reached the Jewish graveyard, she was passed on to the adjoining Polish cemetery, to be cared for, temporarily by a Polish cemetery keeper, reports the ... open sewer trench, hiding crouched in the muck for three days. A cousin had told her about the Arenses, and she appealed to them.

Mr. Arens, a Catholic, had been helping Jews, hiding them one and two at a time in his furniture store or his apartment in a four-family house, and then passing them on to the underground. "We had not hard hearts," Mrs. Arens explained. "The Germans had plenty to die," Mr. Arens added.

The Arenses took in Mrs. Grunfeder and Felicia. For two weeks Mrs. Grunfeder stayed there. Mr.

W.J.C. Calls For Courts Of Human Rights

The World Jewish Congress announced that it has submitted a memorandum to the UN Commission on Human Rights emphasizing the critical need for the effective implementation of the Covenant of Human Rights, once adopted, and calling for both the establishment of special domestic and international Human Rights courts to handle complaints, and for thorough publicity of all actions taken on Covenant violations.

Pointing out the "possibility of conflict of opinion" relating to the "interpretation, application and fulfillment" of the Covenant's declarations, the memorandum recommended that effective provisions be included paralleling Articles VIII and IX of the Genocide Convention, which call for implementary action by United Nations organs and for the submission of disputes to the International Court of Justice.

The memorandum stated that implementation of the Covenant must consider both domestic and international aspects of human rights. It therefore suggested establishing: (a) domestic Special Human Rights Courts within each of the Convention's signatory states, to deal with complaints concerning violations of human rights, and a Higher Court for appeals from lower court decisions; and (b) an international committee of jurists selected from the Higher Courts of Appeals for mutual discussion, to maintain a permanent bureau charged with collecting and distributing decisions of the member state courts, and to furnish information for interpreting and implementing the Covenant by the domestic tribunals. The memorandum also proposed an International Court on Human Rights to hear appeals from decisions of the highest domestic courts, and

Says Israel Seeks Capital But Is Not Place To Get Rich Quick

Israel has an industrial, trading and financial potential in the Middle East that may some day make it the counterpart of what England has been historically to the world but it is not a place in which to get rich quick.

These views were elicited by the New York Times from the economic department of the Jewish Agency which has been laboring for the past four months to get before the American public, Jewish and non-Jewish, a realistic appraisal of the economic possibilities of the year-old state. The Israeli Government, a Jewish Agency spokesman said, is anxious to attract foreign capital, including major manufacturers and small investors.

According to the economic experts, Israel expects a total population of 1,500,000 by the end of 1952, which can sustain a capital investment of $2,000,000,000. Less than 10 per cent of this amount has been invested so far, including the $100,000,000 from the Export-Import Bank and private capital.

A problem has been created, it was said, by a number of persons who have gone to Israel and have returned to America disillusioned over inability to swing business deals.

They were said to have desired exceptional advantages in the form of tax exemptions, guarantees of large profit withdrawals and iron-clad guarantees against labor troubles.

The Israelis were said to have taken the following position: where the projects are sufficiently large and important, tax exemptions may be granted; withdrawals of an 8 per cent net profit a year are permissible; labor problems are something that can and should be handled the way they are in other democratic countries.

Jewish Agency four months ago established its economic department. Its director is Robert R. Nathan, of Washington, an economic consultant. Headquarters are at the offices of the agency at 16 East Sixty-sixth Street, New York.

The agency, which is not an official part of the government, has been maintained to represent the continuing interest of Jews outside Israel in its development. It has a voice in the distribution of charitable funds and it has taken on the task of allocating world-wide immigration priorities.

The economic department maintains liaison with a newly-created investment center in Israel which is under the direction of the ministries of finance and trade-industry. This center's role is that of coordinator between foreign investors and Israelis when a deal has neared possible consummation.

One of the first projects of the economic department in New York was the preparation of a monthly economic digest. The first issue, dated July 1, has already been distributed to 12,000 persons.

Among its features is a classified advertising section which this month lists $3,500,000 in investment opportunities as samples of possibilities.

Some of the examples are: asbestos pipes, capital requirement of $300,000; rayon, producer of a specialized product wants a partner, total capital requirement is $190,000,000, of which $60,000 is for machinery; metal doors, a Jerusalem manufacturer of metal doors, cast aluminum windows and other nonferrous castings wants $150,000 partnership capital; hotel, an Israeli group interested in establishing a modern resort seeks 70 per cent of the required capital in America.

Brandeis U. Elects Mrs. Roosevelt To Board

Election of Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt to the board of trustees of Brandeis University was announced by George Alpert, president of the board.

Mrs. Roosevelt will be the first woman on the twelve-member board of the Jewish-sponsored non-sectarian university, at Waltham, Mass., near Boston, now completing its first academic year. Announcement of her election was made to 1,500 women attending the first annual meeting of the Greater Boston Chapter of the Women's Committee of Brandeis.

Other members of the university's board of trustees for the coming year are: Dr. Isadore Lubin, economist and Government official; David K. Niles of Washington, Presidential adviser; Dr. Paul Klapper, president-emeritus of Queens College; Israel Rogosin of New York; Meyer Jaffe of Fall River, Mass.; Dudley F. Kimball of Belmont, Mass.; Jacob Shapiro of Canton, Mass.; and Morrie S. Shapiro, James J. Axelrod, Joseph F. Ford and Norman S. Rabb, all of Boston.

Mrs. Roosevelt has shown interest in Brandeis University since its organization. "One can only pray that it will fulfill the hopes of all those who have suffered in minority groups," she wrote when the university was established.

At convocation ceremonies marking the completion of Brandeis first year, Mrs. Harry L. Michaels, president of the national women's committee, presented a check for $50,000 to Dr. Abraham L. Sachar, university president, for support of the library.

The first Jewish sponsored university in the U. S., Brandeis is being financed primarily by Jews but has also received contributions from non-Jews. "Our immediate goal," Dr. Abraham L. Sachar, president of the university, said, "is the completion of a four-year school. And simultaneously we're working on a long-range fifty-year master plan for the development of professional schools, with medicine and dentistry probably to be added last, because then, as now, we'll install or introduce nothing that is not first-rate."

While still in a fund-raising stage, the university has made two financial arrangements it plans to continue. First, it has extended scholarships to 25 per cent of its student body. "As a non-sectarian 'quality' college," Dr. Sachar said, "we do not practice economic discrimination, just as we have no racial or religious discrimination."

Second, its faculty salaries are high, from $4,000 to $5,000 for instructors to between $8,000 and $12,000 for full professors. "Our trustees," Dr. Sachar said, "did this not only to attract good minds to our university, but also to give men who devote their lives to the academic world high salaries and a decent standard of living."

In the hope that "youngsters will emulate their elders," emphasis has been placed on adding well known scholars to the staff and making them available to lower classmen. "Thus," Dr. Sachar said, "Ludwig Lewisohn teaches freshman composition."

The student body represents thirteen states; applications for the new freshman class, for which 120 to 150 students will be accepted, have come from forty states. The faculty of fourteen members will be increased to twenty-six. Twenty-nine courses will be added to the sixteen offered the first class.

Work has been in progress on the old buildings, inherited with the campus from the defunct Middlesex University, and on the new, planned with an eye to the future. An auditorium, to seat 500 students, will be built this year in the courtyard of Science Hall, the present classroom building. But this will be used as a large lecture hall in three or four years when the library building, by then too small for its purpose, will be turned into a 900-seat auditorium.

A new library will be built with a $250,000 gift already made for that purpose. When ultimately the expected 1,200-student enrollment is reached, a larger auditorium will be constructed and the library building auditorium used as a chapel.

The speed with which these plans move at Brandeis may be gauged by the fact that a New York Herald Tribune reporter approached the administration building by a rocky dirt road on Friday; on Saturday a neat macadam drive[illegible] had been completed in its place.

In spite of high admission requirements (New York State high school teachers must have a Regents' average of 80 in order to apply at Brandeis), a majority of the students have gone in for extra-curricular activities. Under the aegis of the Student Union, they have established "The Turret," a monthly literary magazine, and "The Justice," a bi-weekly newspaper and several clubs.

One of the university's proudest first-year accomplishments has been its establishment of an Institute of Adult Education this spring.

30,000 Hear Concert For Israel

"Music Under the Stars", at Ebbets Field, in New York, was a concert for the benefit of the American Fund for Palestinian Institutions, an estimated 30,000 listening to the music of the Philharmonic-Symphony.

The audience's chattering through early moments of music and scattered rooting for the various soloists as they made their way across the floodlighted outfield made the white-coated orchestra seem out of place on its platform behind third base. It was not an audience to be put upon, either, for when the high lights were dimmed for Nathan Milstein's violin solo and a few low-lying spotlights became blinding it set up a howl. The special lighting effects were quickly abandoned.

The affair began with a procession of fifty-nine flags of the United Nations, carried by Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts, and the playing of the Star-Spangled Banner and Hatikvah, conducted by Leonard Bernstein. Copland's "An Outdoor Overture," followed.

Mr. Milstein turned out to be a fine choice for violin soloist, for his rendition of Bruch's Concerto was nearly impeccable under the revealing amplification. Artie Shaw, too, sounded in top form, and his rendition of the lovely slow movement of Mozart's Clarinet Concerto, played after a fifteen-minute hiatus for rain, was deeply felt.

Regina Resnik and Richard Tucker, both of the Metropolitan Opera, sang three excerpts from "La Tosca," two solos and a duet. Both sounded warm and pleasing. The music concluded with Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait," narrated by Sam Levene.

Edward A. Norman, president of the fund, spoke after the intermission, praising Abe Stark for his work as concert chairman, and presented a plaque to him for his efforts. Mr. Stark expressed his thanks and his pleasure in working for the educational institutions of Israel, which will benefit from the fund.

Medical records show that nine out of ten persons suffering from tuberculosis, whose infections have been discovered early, recover from the disease. And some experts estimate that if all cases of TB could be caught in their early stages, the disease could be wiped out completely in 50 years. TB is slow to cure, but it is curable and it is preventable. Guard against the danger of TB. Have a chest x-ray as soon as possible.

COUNCIL HELPS ISRAELI GIRL IN SOCIAL WORK

Three years ago Rebecca Kapelsohn, a field worker for the National Council of Jewish Women, died while serving the needs of the Displaced Persons in Germany. Today, through a scholarship established in her memory by the Council, Miss Ilse Flatow, of Israel, is preparing herself to carry on Miss Kapelsohn's work. When she completes the course at the Smith College School of Social Work, Northampton, Mass., Miss Flatow will return to Israel, where Miss Kapelsohn had hoped to make her home, and will work among the Displaced Persons for whom Miss Kapelsohn gave her life.

Miss Flatow, who arrived in the U.S. from Ramat Gan, Israel, was [illegible] is a cousin of Dr. Leo Baeck, former Grand Rabbi of Berlin, who miraculously survived the Nazi terror. He was with Miss Flatow's parents at Theresienstadt concentration camp until they were deported to Auschwitz, from which they never returned. In 1939, Miss Flatow fled from Germany to England where she worked in a psychology clinic and studied psychiatric nursing. Since she arrived in Palestine in 1946, she has worked in the most modern Israeli psychiatric clinic, run by the Kupat Cholim, at Geha Hospital, Ramat [illegible] ow will continue her studies in psychiatric social work.

Like the thirty-six previous recipients of overseas scholarships awarded by the National Council of Jewish Women, Miss Flatow will return to her homeland to assume a responsible position and to impart to others the knowledge she has gained in America.

They taste just like the old-time home-made kind.

MIZRACHI INSTITUTES TEACH SKILLS

Young artisans, smithies, and electricity experts are currently being trained for gainful living in two major institutions of the World Mizrachi movement. In Safed, the Yeshiva Torah U'Mlacha ("Study and Labor") is preparing gold, silver, and metal-smiths and is teaching young students fine handicrafts "in the Bezalel tradition." In Jerusalem, a similar yeshiva trains youth in electro-technics. Youths, from 14-16 years of age after completing elementary school, devote four hours each day to religious study and four to craftsmanship. According to a World Mizrachi report, Safed students are making trinkets out of empty cartridge cases found after Israeli-Arab battles. After completing their training, students are expected to form a cooperative.

At Jerusalem, plans for the opening of a combined yeshiva and agricultural college aimed at training religious farmers were announced by the World Mizrachi headquarters. According to present blueprints, the novel institutions will be set up at Kfar Haroeh, near Hadera, with classroom, hostel, and [illegible] buildings. Courses of [illegible] be of two-years' duration, and students will be accepted only after they have completed at least one year at the Yeshiva Bnai Akivah. Students will also be drawn from Mossad Yakir, the World Mizrachi institution which now houses and educates 130 immigrant children. After completing training at the yeshiva-agricultural college, students will establish themselves in various religious settlements throughout Israel.

Cabinet making is one of the favorite hobbies enjoyed by home craftsmen, many of whom take pride in the possession of excellent power tools. Present $10,000 To Woman Trade Unionist

Three hundred friends and admirers of Rose Schneiderman, president of the New York Women's Trade Union League, attended a luncheon in her honor, at Sherry's, 300 Park Avenue, New York.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt headed a list of speakers who reminisced about Miss Schneiderman's influence on the labor movement and on private citizens during her more than forty years as an organizer, official and president of the League.

Mrs. Roosevelt, who spoke before luncheon was served so she could leave for duties at the United Nations, said that the social views of her own children had been shaped by hearing Miss Schneiderman talk in the Roosevelt home. She praised Miss Schneiderman for her enthusiasm and service.

David Dubinsky, president of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union, AFL, said that Miss Schneiderman was one of the first to show that women workers could take an active and important role in trade unions and that her work had helped to establish the kind of free trade union movement that was essential to the existence of a free democratic America.

A purse containing $10,000 was presented to Miss Schneiderman.

[illegible], president of Labor, Abraham Plotkin, Max Zaritsky, president of the United Hatters, Cap and Millinery Union, AFL, of which Miss Schneiderman is a vice-president, and Mrs. Bessie Hillman, widow of Sidney Hillman, late president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, CIO.

American students will be admitted to the Hebrew University in Jerusalem for the academic year 1949-50, according to an announcement by Dr. Israel S. Wechsler, president of the American Friends of the Hebrew University, who returned from a meeting of the Board of Governors of the Hebrew University in Jerusalem. The departments which will be open to American applicants are those in the School of Agriculture, the Faculties of Humanities and Science, and the Department of Education. Applicants from the United States must have completed one year at an American college. Instruction at the University is in Hebrew, and students are expected to have an adequate mastery of the language. Plans are now being made for the reestablishment of the Hebrew and orientation classes for foreign students. As the faculties of the University are still limited, admissions must of necessity be curtailed. Curtailment now applies chiefly to the sciences. Priority is given to veterans of the Israeli Army and to DPs. The Hebrew University Medical School, which opened on May 17, is not now accepting American students. It is expected that a substantial number of the Americans will be GI students. In 1947 over 75 of the 150 Americans at the University were studying under the GI Bill of Rights. Applications and complete details can be secured from the Student Adviser, David E. Goldberg, American Friends of the Hebrew University, 9 East 89th Street, New York, 28.

For centuries no Jewish foot had trod within the ancient cave upon Mount Zion, traditional site of the Tombs of the Kings of the House of David. Last month, as part of victory, Israeli troops broke entrance into the cave and permitted a group of Brazlaver Chassidim to recite prayers on the site. According to a World Mizrachi news dispatch, the visitors, upon entering the underground cave, found a huge mine which Israeli soldiers promptly detonated. Deep within the cave, the Israeli Ministry of Religions set up a holy ark and provided a Sefer Torah. The soldiers joined the chassidim in prayer, the Mizrachi dispatch stated.

HIAS IN AUSTRALIA

The Board of Directors of HIAS (Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society) has approved the purchase by the Society of a building in Melbourne, Australia, where newcomers to that land will be fed and quartered till they are resettled, Samuel A. Telsey, president of HIAS, announced in New York. Mr. Telsey said that his organization, which has been sheltering migrating Jews for the past 64 years, in the U.S. and other countries, is undertaking the project in Australia in view of recently liberalized immigration requirements in that country which have already resulted in the entry of a goodly amount of Jews. He said he expected that augmented groups of Jews will be settling in Australia in the near future. Since the end of the war HIAS has been active in reuniting Jews of Europe with relatives in Australia. On several occasions when Australia-bound Jews armed with entry permits were stranded in France and other parts of Europe due to the lack of transportation, HIAS chartered ship and planes to speed the homeless refugees to their final destination. The purchase and establishment of the HIAS shelter in Melbourne, will be effected through the cooperation of the Australian Jewish Welfare and Relief Society.

Harry S. Greenwood, 3787 Cote des Neiges Road, Montreal, was elected president of Canadian ORT.

In qualifying for membership in the Audit Bureau of Circulations, publishers are doing more than providing advertisers with the facts about the circulation of their publications.

They are also giving active support to the principle that advertising space should be bought and sold only on the basis of verified information — a principle that has contributed in large measure to the interests of all advertisers.

In Canada, the Canadian Jewish Review is still the only Jewish publication printed in any language reaching the Jewish community which is able to claim membership in the Audit Bureau of Circulations.

with authority to invoke the assistance of UN organs for implementation whenever necessary.

Lastly, the World Jewish Congress memorandum asked for the rights of petition and court hearing as complainant or guardian for individual complainants for organizations granted consultative status with the Economic and Social Council, and for thorough and regular publication of all actions undertaken as a result of Covenant violations.

A resolution passed by the UN Commission on Human Rights affirming "the importance and urgency" of the right of individuals, groups and organizations to petition in the case of violation of human rights, was welcomed in a statement by Dr. Maurice L. Perlzweig, the representative of the World Jewish Congress at the UN, as "a first step that will give confidence to multitudes throughout the world."

The resolution, moved jointly by Guatemala, India and the Philippines, with support from Lebanon and from Mrs. F. D. Roosevelt, chairman of the Human Rights Commission, in the name of the U.S., was adopted by ten votes in favor, four against and three abstentions. Great Britain abstained.

The resolution was adopted at the end of a debate on the subject of petition by individuals which heard Dr. Perlzweig present the views of the World Jewish Congress. Dr. Perlzweig told the Commission: "The view that only governments should have an opportunity to draw attention to the violations of human rights, which was advocated by some delegations, would add nothing to the existing arrangements and would in any case be more likely to result in an extension of the area of diplomatic conflict than the redress of grievances. The individual would be faced with the cruel dilemma either of acquiescing in wrong or of invoking the intervention of a foreign government against his own."

"I represent here organizations and communities which consist of the survivors of what President Roosevelt called the greatest crime in history," Dr. Perlzweig said. "Moreover, it is my melancholy duty to inform the Commission that a new wave of racialism is rising in Central Europe and the multitudes of people throughout the world live under the threat of grave discrimination and even of violence and annihilation."

Stating that he was asking for nothing new, Dr. Perlzweig described how the exercise of the right of petition under the Upper Silesian convention and the use of the facilities both of the covenant of the League and the charter of the UN had made it possible in the past for the World Jewish Congress to bring relief to large numbers of people and save many lives.

many industries such as food, textiles and clothing, metalworks and machinery, diamond cutting, woodwork, tanning, chemicals, stone and cement, electrical equipment. Diamond cutting, started by Belgian refugees, is in an advanced stage.

For the most part, these businesses require rather substantial sums. Persons ready to invest $10,000 to $20,000 have been encouraged to put their money into one of four investment companies.

These are the Palestine Economic Corporation, the largest and oldest; American-Palestine Trading Corporation, which is headed by Edmund L. Kaufman, Jewish philanthropist; American-Ereta Israel, and the Israel Corporation of America, which is backed by the Zionist Organization of America.

One factor that friends of the Israelis underline is this: Before large-scale immigration Israel was self-sustaining; with adequate investment capital, it can absorb the immigrants, place them in useful agricultural, industrial and professional functions, and again become a self-sustaining economy of value not only to Israel but the whole undeveloped Middle East.

"utterly false." He said 80 to 85 per cent of the investments were brought in by immigrants, reports the New York Times.

The economist also took issue with persons who believe Israel to be 99 per cent composed of cooperatives. Only a few years back, he said, cooperatives were only about eight per cent of the economy. The impression in America on cooperatives, which he termed "nonsense," came from comments of visitors returning from Israel, Mr. Nathan declared.

Labor's role in Israel was praised at the meeting, where Joseph Schlossberg headed a group of Histadrut executives in reporting on the role of workers in the Israeli Government.

Dr. Samuel Wohl, presiding, said that "Israel is the only bastion of democracy in the Middle East" and thus deserves the aid of the United States.

Arens bought her false documents, with which she was able to travel on to Vienna as a "volunteer" worker in a lunchroom. Felicia passed as the Arenses' daughter, come home from living with a country cousin.

In 1944, the Gestapo caught up with the Arenses, and they were brought to Leipzig for forced railway labor. When the war ended, they reached a displaced persons camp in Stuttgart. There, Mrs. Grunfeder, who had tramped over Germany, asking Poles about the Arenses, found them—on Felicia's seventh birthday.

The Arenses came to the U. S. through the International Rescue and Relief Committee in April, 1947. The Grunfeders reached Boston last week, having located an aunt, Mrs. Israel Bodoff, through H. I. A. S. in Venice, Calif. Mrs. Grunfeder asked H. I. A. S. to make possible one more reunion with the Arenses before starting for California so the Arenses met the Grunfeders at the train — and Felicia's story was given to the world.

TODAY WE LIVE IN A GREATER CANADA

GREATER MARKETS-

The stores of Canada tell the story.

Smart new fronts and clean, bright interiors; up-to-the-minute facilities for faster, easier, more convenient shopping; modern displays and smartly packaged products: all are the visible symbols of Canada's modern merchandising progress.

Canadian distribution methods are more effective, more efficient than ever. Recent advances in marketing have been as remarkable as those in this country's record-breaking production and the development of natural resources.

The whole vast field of merchandising today presents new and greater opportunities for successful Canadian careers.

"Imagination in business knows no geographical boundaries.

In this young and vigorous nation originality, based on sound thinking, pays off. To the young Canadian who is willing to raise his sights above the conventional, and work hard to make his vision come true, no country today offers greater opportunities for success than our own", says Hedleigh Venning.

HEDLEIGH VENNING

began his career as a junior salesman in 1926. From the beginning, he became aware of the opportunity awaiting the application of imagination and creative thinking to any job. A keen student of modern packaging, an enthusiastic and energetic worker, he is now vice-president in charge of sales of Shirriff's Limited, one of Canada's larger food product companies; a great believer in scientific marketing and a leader in the field of selling and advertising.
